

Tim Byrnes on Discourse

I enter daily into three main modes of Discourse: music/poetry, theology, and narrative literature/history. My understanding of their effect is as follows: music/poetry is the expressive; theology is conversation with the Divine; and narrative literature/history provides a practical guide in relating to both God and people. There are certainly intersections between these literary modes, and they can be manifest on an almost infinite variety of media. For me, they work together to provide a life that is full of vital relationship on every level
